Love 3:16

A manuscript by: T.J. Breeden

Feb. 5, 2008

“Love 3:16 was written in the backdrop of a simple idealism: “The love we demonstrate for ourselves and for each other should mirror the affection that the eternal guardian & provider of the universe offers unto us.” My goal is that this manuscript will serve as a sort of conversation piece, one that will not only spark a substantive dialogue about ‘love,’ but force us to analyze how we choose to exercise it.”

“This manuscript examines how one contemporary translation of 2,000 year old text can be proven relevant in the most inter-personal of circumstances... loving others. God offers an affection that is merciful, faithful, unfailing... Imagine a place within our own personal associations that promotes a passionate devotion that gives more than it expects to receive in return. I invite you to imagine a love that inspires sacrifice beyond that of our own understanding... giving more of ourselves, and passing the lesson on for others to adopt... Imagine relationships drawn upon these same principles. Caring for our neighbors, friends, loved ones, and spouses the way that God cares for us... Spiritually, there exists several dynamics to be examined... this is mine.”

“...A very reflective piece; one that invites the reader to explore a different side the author. T.J. continues to impress by demonstrating a level of transparency in his writing that very few have the courage to exhibit. Love 3:16 is the type of book that inspires, and makes you demand more from yourself. A beautiful read!”

T.J. Breeden had his first book published in 2007 (a poetic manuscript entitled: My Rain: Dear Love) and the thrill of having his passion for words converged to print compelled me to further dedicate himself to the art. He recently released his 2nd title; The Lion’s Den: Chronicles of a Las Vegas Money Launderer, in November of 2008. Via a joint venture with a subsidiary of Amazon.com, he has decided to publish these projects by way of The IbL Media Group (a developing entertainment division of Focus-IBL Enterprise Solutions, LLC).
